Pakiko tttttttttto rotondon Aruba,ta e pregunta cu ta ser hasi. Studia esaki bon y ta trece e solucion cla pa e trafico congestiona parti mainta y atardi na e crusada na Airport?

Specialmente den oranan di merdia cu e trafico di turistanan cu ta yega nos isla ta bira enorme y aki ta unda e dolor lo bai ta debi cu e rotondo aki lo no ta e solucion perfecto.

Segun experrtonan,di con no ta traha brugnan cu ta crusa otro y laga e caminda principal di Oranjestad pa San Nicolas mescos y ta solamente e brugnan aki lo anex riba e caretera principal aki segun nan respectivo destinacion.

Tempo lo ta e mihor aliado pa bisa ken ta tin rason y kende no.

Cu e rotondo aki ta otro topico di discucion pa nos politiconan den parlamento y den medionaa di comunicacion,ta un siguransa,miemtras cu e solucion mes.

Metta World Peace reflects on year

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. -- Metta World Peace was the first Los Angeles Lakers player to address the media following his exit interview on Tuesday and could not let go of what could have been as he sifted through the rubble of a second consecutive season that ended with a second-round playoff exit.

"(We) definitely underachieved," World Peace said. "We were the best team in the NBA and lost in five (games). The best team in the NBA should be up 3-2 and playing tomorrow, but the (Oklahoma City Thunder was the) better team that took advantage of the moment, that took advantage of their time, they seized, they grabbed it and they held on to it."

The Lakers lost to the Thunder 106-90 in Game 5 of the Western Conference semifinals on Monday, losing the series 4-1.

Despite the seemingly lopsided series result, the Lakers squandered late leads in Games 2 and 4 and World Peace believes that his team isn't far off its championship standard.

"I like this team," World Peace said. "You look at the team, you all saw some of the amazing things we did. OKC, we had those guys beat fairly easy. Fairly easy we had those guys beat, but that's the difference between a team that's been together that added Derek Fisher, and that team has been together so they knew exactly how they're playing together in the fourth quarter, versus a team that hasn't been together."

Added World Peace: "We had them beat. Stunned. So stunned. It's stunning."

Dwelling on the past won't do World Peace and the Lakers any good, however and the mercurial forward knows there are a bevy of questions surrounding the next steps the franchise will make.

One of the questions near the forefront is what the future holds for World Peace who averaged a career-low 7.7 points per game in his 13th season and turns 33 years old in November.

"The Lakers, they did a lot for me so I like it here," World Peace said. "But, whatever is best for the Lakers. If it's me not being here, if it's good for the Lakers, it's good for me because the Lakers, they did nothing but great things for me." World Peace has two years and approximately $15 million remaining on his contract with the Lakers (with the second year being a player option) and for much of the season it appeared he would be a natural target for the Lakers to exercise their one-time amnesty provision on, which allows NBA teams to take a bad contract off their salary cap.

After coming into training camp admittedly out of shape following the lockout, World Peace improved as the season wore on. He averaged 14.1 points on 47.3 percent shooting in 13 games in April and continued the increased production by averaging 11.7 points in the playoffs once returning from a seven-game suspension for his hit on Oklahoma City's James Harden.

"I was able to play dominant again," World Peace said, crediting the Lakers training staff for helping him recover from a nerve issue in his lower back that hurt him last season. "I'm able to compete against the stars again. That's a great feeling for me. I didn't think I'd get back to that level, honestly."

World Peace would not reveal whether Lakers coach Mike Brown and Lakers general manager Mitch Kupchak made it clear whether they felt the franchise wanted him back next season.

"That's something that you will have to ask them," World Peace said.

The noted defensive stopper said that one of the issues stopping the Lakers from getting back to the title this season was an over-reliance on Kobe Bryant.

"I think in the end of the game, guys have to trust themselves more," World Peace said. "I think sometimes, not myself, but sometimes guys look to Kobe too much. I think guys have to understand that Mitch brought you here, Mitch also assembled teams that won championships so he knows what he's doing and he brought you here for a reason. Because you're good. So, believe in yourself."

World Peace said he struggled with being in awe of Bryant when he first joined the Lakers in the summer of 2009 because Bryant played like Michael Jordan and Jordan was his favorite player, but he has learned to be an instigator rather than a spectator alongside Bryant.

"A lot of young guys went through it this year and I think coming back next year guys will understand just chip in. Don't watch," World Peace said. "It's not about watching anymore. We're not watching no more. Chip in so Kobe can get his sixth ring, so I can get my second and Pau (Gasol) can get his third and things like that."

World Peace also addressed the coaching change from Phil Jackson to Brown, admitting, "It was a bit of getting used to," but he made sure not to blame Brown for the Lakers' fate against the Thunder.

"Mike wasn't out there guarding Kevin (Durant)," World Peace said. "That was me. Kevin scored on me. Mike didn't throw turnovers at the end of the game. Mike didn't miss a 3-point shot, I missed a 3-point shot. Mike didn't come in out of shape."

World Peace then caught himself.

"He did come in out of shape," World Peace said with a smile. "Actually, he is a fat-ass."

Heat pummel Pacers, move within win of Eastern Conference finals berth

MIAMI -- Suddenly, the road back to the Eastern Conference finals no longer looks daunting for Miami.

Not after the Heat left the Pacers beat up and banged up.

LeBron James scored 30 points, Dwyane Wade added 28, and the Heat moved a win away from the NBA's final four with a 115-83 victory over the hurting Pacers on Tuesday night, a game where three flagrant fouls added more chapters to an already-physical series and Indiana watched starting forwards Danny Granger and David West leave with injuries.

"This is our challenge right now, to leave it behind us," Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said. "A lot of good things tonight, but we have to focus on the next one."

That would be Game 6 in Indiana on Thursday night. The Heat lead the best-of-seven East semifinals 3-2.

James added 10 rebounds and eight assists. Shane Battier scored 13 points, Mario Chalmershad eight points and 11 rebounds, and Udonis Haslem finished with 10 points for Miami, which never trailed, held a 22-2 edge in fast-break points and shot a franchise playoff-record 61 percent -- best of any team in the playoffs this season.

Paul George scored 11 points for Indiana, with Granger and West adding 10 points apiece. Granger left with a sprained left ankle in the third quarter and departed the arena in a walking boot, while West departed with what the Pacers called a left knee sprain at the end of that period -- something that West thought was born of a cheap shot.

Replays showed Battier boxed out West on the play where he fell backward, but it did not appear any Heat player hit West below the waist.

It was an 11-point game when Granger departed early in the third quarter, and the Heat outscored the Pacers by 21 the rest of the way.

"We learned early in this series, you don't get two wins for a blowout," Pacers coach Frank Vogel said.

A series marked by ugly moments had perhaps its worst with 19.4 seconds remaining when Miami reserve center Dexter Pittman went across the lane to send a forearm into the chin area of Indiana's Lance Stephenson -- who was caught on camera making a choke sign toward James during the Pacers' Game 3 win, drawing the ire of the Miami locker room.

Pittman was caught on camera winking after the foul.

"I don't know if that was retaliation. ... I'm sure the NBA will and do what they have to do," Granger said, adding that Stephenson got X-rays for a possible collarbone problem, but they came back negative for a fracture.

Miami, which had gotten into quick deficits in each of the first four games, was the team that started hot in Game 5, running out to a 19-8 lead on the strength of three 3-pointers from Battier -- who had been 2 for 19 from the field in the first four games of the series. Battier left his mark in many ways, even stopping a 3-on-1 Indiana break to set up a score by Wade at the other end.

But much like the Heat did in Game 4 when Indiana threatened to turn things into an early runaway, the Pacers settled down in a hurry.

The Pacers made Wade see blood early on, a couple of early flagrant fouls reminding everyone that these teams don't seem to like each other much.

Tyler Hansbrough struck first, hitting Wade on a play where the 2006 NBA finals MVP wound up with a cut over his right eye, similar to what Haslem received at Indiana in Game 4. So Haslem retaliated against Hansbrough not long afterward, earning a flagrant-1 foul that left the Pacers saying it should merit a flagrant-2 and automatic ejection.

"Referee's call," Vogel said.

Said Haslem: "I've seen worse in this league in nine years. Nobody wants to give an inch and everybody's going hard."

Following the game, Pacers president Larry Bird said he felt his team wilted when faced with Tuesday's physical play.

"I can't believe my team went soft. S-O-F-T," Bird told the Indianapolis Star. "I'm disappointed. I never thought it would happen."

When asked to elaborate more, Bird told the newspaper, "That's all I have to say."

Even after facing the big deficit, Indiana even had two shots to tie or take the lead late in the first half, the second of those a 3-point try from Granger with 3:03 remaining.

It didn't go down. He did.

Granger landed on James' foot after the shot, spraining his left ankle and leaving the game. The Heat outscored Indiana 8-2 the rest of the half, with James -- who had been guarded by Granger for much of the series -- scoring seven of them.

He opened the burst with a 3-pointer, stole the ball from West and dunked for a seven-point lead with 26 seconds left, then capped the half by coming up with a defensive rebound, passing to Wade, getting the ball back just before the halftime horn sounded and laying it in to send Miami into the break with a 49-40 edge.

"They played at their tempo," West said. "We weren't able to get enough stops. You can't allow a team to shoot 60, 60-plus, whatever from the field."

Granger tried to play in the second half, lasting about 3 minutes before realizing his ankle wasn't going to let him continue. X-rays were negative, which was about the only piece of good news for Indiana.

By then, Indiana was ailing, and Miami was rolling.

James leaned back to catch a slightly wayward pass from Chalmers near the Miami bench, then firing it in one motion to Wade for an easy score as the reigning MVP toppled atop Heat assistant coach Ron Rothstein. Mike Miller even made the crowd roar for defendingLeandro Barbosa and forcing a missed 3-pointer late in the quarter -- the highlight there being Miller played for about a minute while missing one sneaker.

When Granger left, it was 56-45. By the end of the quarter, Miami's lead was 76-57, and the Pacers were down another starting forward as well. West left at the end of the period and also headed to the locker room, diagnosed shortly afterward with a sprained left knee.

"I'm fine," West said, adding that he thinks Granger could be ready to play Thursday. Granger wasn't so sure, though added that his foot would "have to fall off" for him to miss the game.

So now the Heat are one win from the East finals, after a series filled with twists and turns.

There was Vogel's accusation before the series started that the Heat were floppers, Chris Bosh's lower abdominal strain that sidelined him midway through Game 1, James and Wade missing key chances late in the Game 2 loss, Stephenson's gesture toward James and the 40-point, 18-rebound, nine-assist effort from James in Game 4.

And now a blowout -- followed by a chance for a Heat close out on Thursday.

"When we defend and we rebound, we're a very good team," James said.

Roger Clemens juror skeptical

WASHINGTON -- Among the 29 questions the Roger Clemens jury wanted to ask the pitcher's chief accuser, Brian McNamee, one cut to the heart of the case.

"Why should we believe you when you have shown so many inconsistencies in your testimonies?"

"I won't ask that," U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton declared during a bench conference with trial attorneys to decide which juror questions he would read. "That's for them to decide."

The question makes it sound as if at least one of the jurors in the perjury case has serious doubts about the credibility of the government's key witness against the 11-time All-Star pitcher.

Or it could be that the juror believes McNamee, but wanted to play devil's advocate just to make sure.

If the World Series can have days off, so can trials of baseball players. The court did not sit Tuesday because the judge had another obligation, a timely pause following five-plus grueling days of testimony from the government's key witness. In addition, Walton's practice, rare among judges, of allowing jurors to submit their own questions allows an unusual mid-trial glimpse of how the case looks to those whose opinions will ultimately matter most. Clemens is charged with lying to Congress when he testified in 2008 that he had never used steroids or human growth hormone. McNamee, Clemens' longtime strength coach, says he injected Clemens with steroids in 1998, 2000 and 2001 and with HGH in 2000. He is the trial's only witness to claim firsthand knowledge of Clemens using those substances. Of course, when the World Series takes a break, it's easy to tell who is winning. Definitive scores are kept. The first team to get four victories takes home the trophy. The subjective nature of a jury trial makes such score-keeping impossible, especially when considering that this jury cares little about baseball and knew little or nothing about Clemens at the outset. The government might end up having the better case, but by then the jurors might have been put off by a plodding presentation by prosecutors that is literally putting people to sleep. Two jurors have already been dismissed for dozing off during a trial now in its sixth week. Clemens' top lawyer, Rusty Hardin, could have the opposite problem. He is colorful, witty and displays the type of courtroom personality lacking by the government, but his scattershot method of cross-examination is confusing and sometimes hilarious. A defense lawyer wants to create confusion and doubt among the jurors, but there's also the possibility that the panel will perceive Hardin as someone putting on an act that's more style than substance.

The trial was always going to revolve around McNamee's credibility -- it's not an understatement that he is 95 percent of the government's case -- so the jurors' impressions of him are crucial. On Monday, they wrote their questions for him on index cards supplied by the court. The judge then huddled with lawyers from both sides out of earshot of the jury to decide which ones can be asked. The transcript of those discussions was made available Tuesday. The sheer fact that there were 29 questions shows a degree of uncertainty about McNamee's testimony. At least two questions dealt with how McNamee came to assume that Clemens had previously used steroids in 1998. (McNamee essentially says he pieced it together through fragments of overheard conversation and locker room innuendo.) Someone wanted to know how McNamee could have been "surprised" to see HGH items in a shaving kit in Clemens' bathroom before injecting Clemens' wife, Debbie, sometime around 2003. (McNamee said he ordered the shipment on a previous visit to the Clemens house in Houston and had forgotten about it.)

One question referred to a couple of "email threads" between Clemens and McNamee. The judge and Clemens' lawyer, showing a deficiency in cyber-vocabulary, were perplexed. Prosecutor Daniel Butler had to explain: "In other words, a series of emails."

"I never heard the word `thread' used in that context," Walton said.

"I haven't either," Hardin said.

The jury has been ushered in and out of the courtroom repeatedly during the trial. At other times, they're subjected to listening to "white noise" from the speakers while the judge and lawyers hold lengthy conferences. They are fully aware that they're not being told everything, and one was curious about an email that had a huge portion blacked out in the middle.

"May the jury see the complete email and the rest of the email trail?" the juror wrote on the card.

Robinson Cano, Phil Hughes lead Yankees past Royals

NEW YORK -- Alex Rodriguez and the New York Yankees are still looking to bust out with that big hit. The mood in the clubhouse was much better, though, following a much-needed win.

Robinson Cano homered, Phil Hughes beat Kansas City for the second time this month and New York eked out a 3-2 victory over the Royals on Tuesday night.

Derek Jeter delivered a bases-loaded single that tied the score and New York rallied from an early two-run deficit to snap a three-game skid. Shut out Monday in the series opener, the Yankees (22-21) went 2 for 7 with runners in scoring position -- one night after they finished 0 for 13 in those situations for their worst performance with RISP since 1990.

"It wasn't that pretty, but that was a good win," said Rodriguez, who struck out with the bases loaded but combined with Mark Teixeira on a game-saving defensive play. "It felt really good to win a game like this. Sometimes you need a game like this to kind of get you on a roll. Hopefully it's a good sign of things to come. We haven't been winning these kinds of games."

New York, which had lost six of seven to drop into a last-place tie with Boston in the AL East, now has eight hits in its last 79 at-bats (.101) with runners in scoring position.

Hughes (4-5) gave up five hits in six innings while striking out seven, beating Royals right-hander Luke Hochevar (3-5) for the second time in 17 days.

"It seemed like nothing was a walk in the park tonight," Hughes said.

The Yankees caught a break when Mike Moustakas lined into a double play to end the eighth. Rafael Soriano worked the ninth for his third save, retiring Alcides Escobar with a runner on third to end Kansas City's five-game winning streak away from home.

Rodriguez fielded Escobar's grounder behind third base and made a high throw across the diamond. Teixeira stretched out his 6-foot-3 frame and kept his toe on the bag as New York got the call on a bang-bang play.

"I don't think there's many other first basemen in the league that could stretch like that and make that play," Hughes said.

"Had 'em all the way," Jeter said.

Cano put the Yankees on the scoreboard with a long solo homer in the fourth, making him 6 for 12 with three home runs and nine RBIs against Hochevar -- including a grand slam May 6 in Kansas City.

New York tagged Hochevar for seven runs and seven hits over 2 1/3 innings in that outing and he entered Tuesday night 0-2 with an 8.83 ERA in four career games against the Yankees.

He hung tough this time, coughing up a 2-0 lead but keeping Kansas City in it when the Yankees appeared poised to finally break loose.

Teixeira, batting seventh for the second consecutive game, singled through the shift to start the fifth and went to second when Jeff Francoeur bobbled the ball in right for an error.Russell Martin was grazed by a pitch and Dewayne Wise reached on a perfectly placed bunt single even though the Royals were expecting a sacrifice.

Once again, the Yankees had the bases loaded and none out with big hitters coming up. They came up empty in that situation during Monday night's 6-0 defeat, but not this time.

Jeter dumped an RBI single into right and Curtis Granderson drove in a run with a groundout, giving New York a 3-2 lead.

"We scored a lot of runs right after that and piled on," Jeter said sarcastically.

Cano was intentionally walked to load the bases for Rodriguez, and the Yankees had a chance to really bust it open. But Rodriguez struck out, drawing boos from the crowd of 37,674, and Raul Ibanez went down swinging as well.

New York never managed another baserunner.

"Hoch pitched great. He did a great job in that inning. They didn't really hit the ball hard," Royals manager Ned Yost said. "He limited the damage bigtime."

Kansas City grabbed an early lead when No. 9 batter Humberto Quintero went the other way on Hughes' hanging curve for an RBI double in the second.

Francoeur added a solo shot in the fourth to make it 2-0, his third homer this season and second in two nights at Yankee Stadium.

Hughes has served up 11 home runs in 47 1/3 innings this year. He has allowed at least one in all nine starts, the longest streak by a Yankees pitcher since Jack McDowell in 1995.

Economia di Aruba ta tranca, mester alivio pa trahado , doño di trabao y consumidor

Awe den luna di mei 2012, Aruba su economia ta tranca tanto pa trahado, doño di trabao y e consumidor en general. Mester crea espacio pa alivio. Un manera rapido ta un reforma fiscal.

Segun Mr. Juan Ady Thijsen mester bin eleccion a termino corto y cera un acuerdo social pa cuatro aña den cual ta acorda un alivio fiscal den tur sector pa crea entrada tanto pa doño di trabao como trahadonan.

Aruba ta e pais cu un sistema fiscal mas halto di mundo segun un studio di KPMG. Aruba 58.95%, Sweden 56.6%, Denemarken 55.4, Hulanda 52%, Austria 50%, Belgica 50% Yapon 50% , UK 50%, Finland 49.2 y Ireland 48%.

"Aruba, a Dutch territory, has the highest income tax rate in the world. It is also the only country in the Americas to make the top 10 list. The tax rate used to be as high as 60 percent before 2007. The current top marginal rate of 59 percent kicks in at around $165,000. Married individuals have a lower maximum rate of 55.85 percent, compared with single taxpayers at 58.95 percent. Other notable taxes include a capital gains tax of 25 percent, along with health, pension and accident insurance premiums. With an array of social security taxes, Aruba is known to have one of the highest living standards in the Caribbean.The small island's exceptionally high tax rate is also much higher than the Caribbean average of 26.7 percent. Islands like the Bahamas, Bermuda and Cayman Islands have no personal income taxes. The closest to Aruba in terms of income tax rates are neighboring South American countries Argentina, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala and Venezuela, which have maximum tax rates ranging between 31 percent and 40 percent, according to KPMG. "

doño di trabao ta paga:

Werkgeversaandeel AOV/AWW 9.5%,Werknemersaandeel AZV 7.565%, Werkgeversaandeel pensioen 1%, Winstbelasting 28% of inkomstenbelasting 58.95%, Dividendbelasting 10%, BBO 1.5%, Seguro di trahado 2.65%,Seguro di accidente entre 0.25 y 2.5%, Cessantie awg.40,00 pa cada trahado., invoerrechten & accijnzen average 6%.

Werknemers aandeel aov/aww 4%, werkgeversaandeel AZV 2.2210%, werknemersaandeel pensioen 1%, loonbelasting despues inkomstenbelasting maximum 58. 95, grondbelasting.

E nivel halto di impuesto cu ta ser paga na Aruba, ta strobando espacio pa inversion y ta causa demotivacion tanto cerca doño di trabao como trahado. Ainda Prome Ministro ta rabia cu ningun hende un kier inverti. No ta pornada sr. Malmberg a manda Sr. Eman bay haci su huiswerk. Aruba tabata riba e bon caminda cu introduccion di BBO pa baha e peso fiscal grandi y cambiele den uno simpel y efectivo na unda un y tur ta contribui. AVP a hunga politica cu BBO y awor pueblo ta paga e consecuencia. Un reforme fiscal ta urgente pa Aruba y pa esey mester un gobierno nobo. Ademas lo mester tin un areglo di productividad y tambe mester haci uzo di instrumento pa apoya e consumidor manera antiwoekerwet y un prijs rapportage verplichting.

E UNICO Mercado unda Aruba ta busca turista cu a crece ta e paisnan di Latino America….Argentina a crece cu 113.1 %...den porcentahe ta parce hopi …den practica e No ta como cu e Mercado aki ta hopi abao mes ultimo tempo debi na nan crisis.

Turista di Venezuela a crece cu 6.9%, di Brazil cu 6.8% mientras cu di Colombia a crese cu 23.9 %. Segun e analisis pa motibu cu e brazileronan a occupa e asientonan den avion lo NO tin pa e colombianonan…un desaroyo cuestionable….cu otro palabra mester di mas vuelo y si ta posibel …directo for di e mercadonan.

Como un sorto di "doekje …. Pa tapa e sangramento….e analisis di A.T.A. ta menciona e A.D.R. y e Ref Par pa suavisa e cifranan negativo cu a worde menciona. Pa loke tat rata e A.D.R.(Aruba daily Rate) esaki a baha cu 1% di $. 211,69 na april 2011 pa $. 209,50 na april 2011. Mientras ta menciona cu e "ganashi pa kamber" a subi cu 8.9% di $. 159,29(april 2011) pa $ 170.20 na april 2012.

Aki PPA kier apunta …cu lo ta bon pa crea e entrada pa henter e Isla….No solamente e hotelnan…. cuanto a worde gasta den nos sector pafor di e hotelnan…nos Restaurantnan, nos Transporte…. nos Comercio etc…. ?? Esaki lo duna un miho bisto…….pasobra

No ta solamente nos Hotelnan ta forma parti di nos Economia … pero nos sector pafor tambe !!!

Entodo caso PPA ta hana cu tin un desaroyo alarmante den sector di turismo …cual mester di atencion di tur autoridad….Ministro di Turismo, ATA, AHATA…. etc Henter nos comunidad… ban evita cu e desaroyo negative aki… bira peor !!
